Medium Description: Defence service records set out the essentials of a person's service in the forces and were used to administer the movements and pay of their personnel. They were not intended to be an everyday account of events in a service person's career. However, they do commonly contain biographical information supplied on enlistment, as well as important details on a person's service. Although most records contain the same basic elements, they do vary in the amount of information they contain.
